

Should Fire Works be Banned?

I think Fire Works should be banned. It brings joy to everyone and brings great excitement. But think of the health and safety. Every year there are 18, 500 fires caused by fireworks. Even sparklers burn at a temperature of around 2,000 degrees, hot enough to melt some metals.

I think fireworks should be banned because it does harm to people and animals. Animals actually are scared of Fireworks and if they even don't see the fireworks they get petrified by the noise. They get so scared they try their best to get into their owners home or into sheds. Fire Works also create pollution too. When you set the fire work into air, all the tiny pieces fly into the air and land somewhere else where it will not get picked up. Even the packets it comes in, gets dumped on the ground. It's so dangerous that 7.9 people in the world get killed by these amusing FireWorks. And over a thousand Get injured! If you thought the pollution and deaths and injuries were bad, Fire Works pollutes the air. Plus many people can not sleep during the Fire Works, they say it's annoying and very irritating.

This is why I think Fire Works should be banned.
By Nevaeh Letiu.